

Everyone has a personal space bubble

- There are lots of times when it feels good to be close to people, like some awhi (cuddle, hug) or giving a high five
- Sometimes when you stand too close to someone, you might feel uncomfortable and realise you are in someone's space bubble or they are in yours
- Some tamariki (children) might still be learning about personal space bubbles and might stand too close
- It is OK to tell or remind someone if they are in your personal bubble

It is important to respect other people's personal space

Check if it is ok

Let people know
"You're in my bubble"

"Can I give you a hug?"

For more information, check out www.stop.org.nz

stop

A community Free from Sexual Abuse
He Hāpori Waatea/Taitookai